A Night with the Surveying Party.

The Chief of the survey selects the places for camping, and in his absence, the next in command, Capt. Bradford had made the selection in this case, and it was on a patch of level green-sward, reaching down to Archie McIntosh's farm, on the side next the river, and touching a close thicket of mesquite at the base of the foot-hills on the opposite side. The road from Globe to the mouth of the Tonto crossed it; and beside the road two families that had journeyed, since last March, "all the ways from San Antonio, Texas," and were "going to Phoenix," as one of their emburged and sunbonneted women told us, had camped. As we rode into the twin encampments—the one with its table set, brightly painted wagons, transits and levels and bright young men, the other with everything, human, equine and wooden travel-stained and worn, with the long shadows of the Mazatzal's passing the surveyors and resting on the prairie schooners of the immigrants, it looked as if the sun was spreading a parting benediction over a fast dying institution, and covering it with a glory it had nobly earned. In camp a ready welcome was extended to the visitors, including the Belt's railway editor, and the "new man from Boston," and supper was had. What supper is there like that in a camp, after all; especially when one's appetite is whetted with a thirty mile ride, at an altitude running from 4050, down to 2000 feet, above the sea level. After supper we sat and watched the sunlight creeping along the mesa on the north side of the Salt river till it touched the iron-stained buttes in the foot-hills of the Sierra Anchas, and turned them into vermilion illusions; till it touched the brown cliffs and turned them purple; till it touched the delicate outlines of the pines upon the mountain tops and turned them to gold. Little masses of nebulous clouds were floating about in the face of a crimson sky, with their rounded edges showing colors of gold and silver where they were light or heavy; and all the while the "boys" were smoking their after supper cheroots; and the "Colonel" was taking in the beauty of the scene; and the tired mules were eating leisurely of the rank barley hay; and the night kept stealing on apace; and the water from the Grapevine Springs was singing a mild second to the murmuring of the evening wind through the cottonwoods; and the waters of the Salt river, rushing past masses of dead drift wood, and fringes of willows, and yellow barley fields, and through rough gorges and over age-rounded boulders sounded a monotonous bass. And still the shadows grew deeper; and the Texans came over to our camp and listened while the "boys" sang "the sweet bye and bye," and we associated it in our minds with the advent of our railroad; and they sang, "there's a land that is fairer than this," and we did not believe it, because it could not be; and the night was deepening; and they sang till the welkin rang, and the air grew so full of melody that when we woke the next morning under the starlight—we'd gone to sleep under the starlight—and heard the birds singing, we thought it was the same song; and the harmony of the trickling water from the springs, and the noise of the Salt river seemed the music of a dream; and the disengaged odors of the crushed mint leaves that grew on the margin of an acquia, near by, came to us like an opiate to woo us back to slumber and to dreamland. And so we spent our "night with the surveyors"—the "boys" scattered around promiscuously, and Col. King, the chief, and ourself under the same piece of canvas, and the same blue sky and bright stars.

Last week they had a series of festivities down at the Salt river, which culminated in a grand ball at Archie McIntosh's. There were races on Wednesday, May 30th. In the 300 yard race, which was the principal one, four horses started: Wiltz Flippen's brown colt, Mill's roan mare, Hazard's brown mare and Livingston's horse. Flippen's colt took first money, and Mill's mare, second. Several races of minor importance, but splendidly contested, followed. There was considerable betting on the different events, and winners and losers took the stakes or their medicine, as the case may be with the best of good humor. An excellent dinner was served at Gordon's. The dance in the evening was prefaced by a school exhibition, in which the participants acquitted themselves very creditably. About forty couple were present at the dance, and the sunlight was resting on the river when the party broke up. Social pleasures are not so frequent in such a new community as that of the Salt river, but the one referred to will remain a red letter day in the memories of the participants.

Our archeological editor was presented by Miss Sarah Armour, with an almost perfect dish, taken from a Toltec ruin, on the Salt river, a piece of copper ore which had been subjected to the action of considerable heat, a sea shell, belonging to the family of edible mollusca, and fragments of skull that were nearly half an inch thick. They can be seen in our cabinet.

AN IDYL FROM TABLE MOUNTAIN CAMP.

There were sounds of mirth and merriment 'neath the trees at Bloody Tanks; Tempting vands displayed on the white cloths, Spread on the mossy banks.

Madons fair, with beaming eyes; Matrons of graver mien; Young men and old were seated there On nature's carpet green.

Devouring chicken salads, Drinking champagne, sparkling bright; Munching biscuits, eating cakes and pies With picnic appetite.

Until each had eaten quite as much As he could hold, I wren, When a prospector, coming down the hill, Appeared upon the scene.

Two little burros came before, Each with his little pack; A coffee pot, a frying pan, Some bacon in a sack.

The inevitable bag of beans, A pick and shovel too; Some "specimens" in a gunny sack The "grub man" to hoo-doo.

He gazed upon the happy group, With wonder and surprise, At such a curious goings on, When an old pard he spies.

And beckoning to him, calls him out, Grasps him by the hand, Says—"what's down hyar old son? I do not understand."

"We're having a little picnic, Pop; All these folks you see."

"A picnic! What the deuce is that? 'Tis suthin' new to me."

"Tell me what you do my boy, And I'll not soon forget it."

"Why, we bring our grub here 'neath the trees And all sit down and eat it."

Then grasping his old battered hat Upon the ground he threw it; "I've had a picnic twenty year And darn me if I know it."

(HIA? HIA?)

The Nilson mine, one of the much contended Isabella group is showing up splendidly. It is on a strong vein which lies a short distance north of the trail to Oakvale, and distant from Globe, about 4 1/2 miles. The ore is rich, but cannot be handled under existing conditions as there is no smelter to reduce it in. It is a carbonate of silver, intermixed with some carbonate of copper. The percentage of lead is about 30, and of copper 15; while the silver runs up to $200 per ton. It is owned by a man named Mitchel.

The Happy Jack, one of the Isabella group, and one to which we have often referred as a proof of the folly of the men who abandon mines at a time that's unfortunate for themselves, is continually improving. They are now taking out very rich ore from a five foot vein, at a depth of 92 feet. Only a few feet from the main ledge, a parallel feeder has been found, ten inches thick, which has given stays ranging from $300 to $3000 per ton.

LOST.—One brown Russian leather pocket book, containing engineer's certificates, and papers only valuable to the owner. The finder will be liberally rewarded by returning the same to F. J. Taffany or J. R. Nichols.

The Belt has received a whole sack full of Reports of the Commissioner of Agriculture from G. H. Oury. Our farmer friends on the Salt or Gila rivers can get copies by sending for them.

LOST.—Between the Centennial mine and Globe, C. Hayse's assay book. A reward of $5 will be paid to any one leaving it at Eaton & Bailey's, the Pinal Brewery or the Belt office.

Old Dominion Copper Mining Co.'s shipments of work, 96 bars—31,15 pounds. Total shipment, 3,561,470 pounds. Product to date, 4,148,310 pounds.

A little soot caught fire in the smoke stack at the Isabella mill, a few days ago, which did no damage. It was a case of much smoke and little fire.

Our railway editor returns thanks to the surveying corps of the A. M. B. railroad for their kindness, on the occasion of his recent visit to them.

Mr. Coffin, for a long time in the employ of the Takoma Copper Co. and a deservedly popular gentleman, left for the East yesterday morning.

The transfer of the $15,000 of Gila County bonds, purchased by Mr. Freud of Tucson, was effected through the banking house of D. Henderson.

The Citizen's General Committee of the A. M. B. road had a very harmonious meeting on Wednesday evening. The reports were all favorable.

Smelting operations will be suspended at the Old Dominion, on Monday, pending the completion and testing of the new petroleum furnace.

Families will be furnished with ice-cream at once, by messenger, if they will leave their bucket, cash, and destination at Hunter's saloon.

NOTICE.—All sorts of plain sewing done with neatness and celerity by an accomplished seamstress at the New York Bakery.

Next week we will publish the contract between the A. M. B. road, and the merchants, and the signatures.

R. L. Long has been appointed Probate Judge—a perfectly satisfactory one.

The surveying party are forty miles from Globe.

There will be a Sunday School concert on Sunday evening, at the M. E. church, instead of the regular sermon.

Dr. Heineman and Miss Gill were married yesterday. We hope for them a pleasant journey along the road of life.

Sam Somerville, of the New York Bakery has our thanks for his contribution of cakes, one frosted, to the Belt's mess.

Taylor & Hatch have in their stationery department, the most varied assortment of that line of goods, and all of the leading periodicals, and standard novels.

Rev. Mr. Windes requests us, on behalf of the Baptist church of Globe, to thank the ladies and gentlemen who so kindly assisted them in their festival.

Our old-time friend, Alonzo Bailey, has had the scope of his responsibilities enlarged—a girl baby to look after. We wish him, and his amiable wife, joy.

Taylor & Hatch have the finest lot of imported and domestic wines, whiskeys and brandies ever offered to an Arizona public. They will sell in quantities to suit.

There should not be any change in the county road to Stanton. At present it is level; the change would involve a very heavy pull. The few must not be permitted to gain at the expense of the many.

The owners of the Fame mine had a test run of four tons of their refuse ore made, which resulted in a return of 60 ozs. to the ton. It will be remembered that the first class ore from this mine yielded, at the Stonewall mill, a few weeks ago nearly $500 per ton.

The railroad will cross the Salt river at the western end of Windy hill. It passes through all the ranches on the south side of the river to Pemberton's, skirts the northern face of Windy hill and then crosses, leaving Eddy's ranch to the west. It will cut the mesa between the Salt river and the Tonto, just about where the wagon road goes up.

The Baptist Church festival on Thursday night was a decided success; all of the best people of the town were there. The quartette—Mrs. Spence, and Messrs Brookner, Hitchcock and Bishop, with Mrs. Chas. Fisk as accompanist performed creditably, and Mrs. Avery sang a scotch ballad—Auld Robin Gray—very prettily. There was a good deal of auctioneering of cakes, and an enormous consumption of ice-cream. The evening was an enjoyable one.

Something Practical.

Globe wants a railroad from its top man down, and they show their feeling by entering into the following contract with the A. M. B. Railroad Co. The contract is a valuable one to the men, because they get $1000 worth of stock, each, in a company that has solid backing, for one quarter of its face value:

GLOBE, A. T., May 30, 1893.

We the undersigned, desiring the early completion of the Arizona Mineral Belt R. R., hereby agree, and each for himself hereby agrees, to labor upon the construction of said R. R. for a term of three months commencing about the first of July next, the term of service to commence at the time of leaving Globe. It being hereby expressly understood and agreed that we shall be subjected to no expense either for board, lodging or ordinary laboring apparel, and shall be allowed three days in which to return to our respective homes.

The undersigned, J. W. Eddy, President of the said Arizona Mineral Belt R. R. Co., for and in behalf of the Mineral Belt Construction and Improvement Co hereby agrees to deliver to each of the subscribers hereto, and laboring as aforesaid, ten shares of full paid and unassessable stock of the said Mineral Belt Construction and Improvement Co. of the par value of $100 each, and to furnish board and ordinary laboring apparel suitable for the work and season, and that the place of labor shall be upon the elevated portions of the first during the heated term. It is further mutually agreed that should any of the subscribers hereto be prevented by sickness or other unavoidable cause from completing their term of labor as aforesaid, then and in that case, such subscriber shall be entitled to an amount of stock proportionate to the amount of labor performed.

There are quite a large number of names already signed, and there will not be any trouble getting as many as are necessary. We will give the names next week.

Ed. Belt.—The following appears in the Argonaut of a recent issue: "A horrible discovery is said to have been made by the Old Testament revisers. The word 'rib' in the second chapter of Genesis, used in describing the creation of Eve, ought more correctly to be rendered 'tail.' This is, indeed, confirmation strong of the theories of Darwin."

Your society editor is somewhat noted for his devotion to the fair sex—how will he reconcile himself to the tail limb of creation? VIATOR.
